

I do NOT want an "established business relationship" exemption applied to the Indiana Telephone Privacy law. This law was put in effect because so many business's ignore when you tell them not to call your house. They do NOT have a right to continually harrass me by making the phone ring at all hours of the day after I tell them to not call me. I can only assume that any exemption applied to various companies and financial interests would be because the FCC values the business's money more than my rights - which would be a contemptable act. Please add my name to the list of people opposing any attempt to allow this "exemption".
Thank you.
Jack Wiggins